Beautiful experiences

In light of their dual-board certifications, stylish office and appearances in the media, one might expect Drs. Yamini and Svehlak to take a “know-it-all” approach to plastic surgery. Not so. Approachable, humble and unassuming, these doctors are frequently moved by the lives they improve. They cite reparative surgeries as some of their most challenging, yet rewarding, cases. Recently, a patient who had been through several breast surgeries with another doctor traveled thousands of miles to have her breasts repaired at Sunset. “Earning trust can be difficult with a patient whose experience elsewhere was not positive,” says Dr. Yamini. Adds Dr. Svehlak, “She was incredibly nervous, but we were able to give her the results she originally wanted.” The entire staff was really touched by her new lease on life. In addition to revisional surgery, the doctors also see a great deal of mothers who want to restore their bodies. “Pregnancy can take a major toll on the body,” say the doctors, “so it’s extremely gratifying to restore their figures—and their confidence.”

A MAKEOVER FOR MOM

After delivering twins, this 36-year-old patient opted for a mommy makeover with Daniel Yamini, MD, FACS, to regain her pre-pregnancy curves and repair the stretched-out muscles in her abdomen. Procedures included a dual-plane breast augmentation, tummy tuck and body sculpting via liposuction. Her post-op photo was taken three weeks after surgery.

BODY OF WORK

“A 37-year-old mother of two, this fitness instructor couldn’t lose the extra skin around her waist, despite her commitment to diet and exercise. Her tummy tuck and associated liposuction helped restore her pre-pregnancy figure and reinvigorated her passion for her career,” says Steven Svehlak, MD, FACS, who performed the procedures shown here.

ABOUT DR. YAMINI AND DR. SVEHLAK

WHAT IS THE BEST COMPLIMENT YOU’VE EVER RECEIVED, DR. YAMINI?

“It’s definitely when patients refer their friends and family. It goes beyond words to let us know that they are happy with their results and really trust us.”

WHAT DOES A CONSULTATION WITH YOU ENTAIL?

“First, listening closely to each patient’s goals, and then taking plenty of time to answer their questions and explain the process. I never want anyone to feel rushed or pressured, so keeping the tone relaxed allows each person to feel comfortable and make an informed decision when they are ready,” says Dr. Svehlak. Adds Dr. Yamini, “Also, many of our patients are eager to talk with prospective patients. We often offer to put them in touch so they can hear firsthand what the experience was like.”

DR. SVEHLAK, WHAT ARE YOUR TOP PRIORITIES?

“We each focus on patient safety, comfort and satisfaction. Safety is always number one. Aesthetically, we both feel that good plastic surgery entails an eye for detail and balance, as well as restraint so that the results look beautiful and natural, not ‘done.’ Most people don’t want to look drastically different, just better.”
