STEVEN SVEHLAK, MD, FACS

This patient wanted more youthful, uplifted breasts without implants. Dr. Svehlak performed an anchor-scar breast lift to achieve this. "The scars have healed well over the six to seven months following her surgery, and will continue to fade over time," Dr. Svehlak says.

DANIEL YAMINI, MD, FACS

This 36-year-old patient and mother of four wanted to correct her sagging breasts and add fullness to them. Dr. Yamini performed a Binelli breast lift using a periareolar (around the nipple) incision and added 339 cc silicone implants for volume.

“our surgical combination of artistry and science can create confidence”

Spring into Action: A Fresh Look in Time for Summer

"Today's women want to look like themselves, only better," says Dr. Daniel Yamini, a double board-certified surgeon who stresses that softer, natural-looking improvements leave patients looking younger and fresher; helping them to feel more confident. "Cosmetic surgery is a way of enhancing confidence from the outside in," says Dr. Steven Svehlak, a partner at Sunset Cosmetic Surgery and double board-certified surgeon. To achieve maximum results and a natural look, the doctors take a comprehensive approach, spending as much time as needed during consultations to find out a patient's goals and primary concerns. This helps to prioritize the course of treatment and deliver the best possible results.

ABOUT DR. YAMINI AND DR. SVEHLAK

HOW WOULD YOU SUGGEST FINDING A QUALIFIED SURGEON?

Before considering a procedure of any kind, it is vital to research a doctor's credentials and experience. A surgeon board-certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery has graduated from an accredited medical school, completed at least five years of surgical training as well as a minimum of two years devoted entirely to the study of plastic surgery. Additionally, you should feel comfortable with your doctor. If it doesn't feel right, keep looking.
